

LOW COSTS HELPED DECIDE

Eight years ago, the decision to build our manufacturing facility in Botetourt County was based on several positive aspects of the area, including: Education level of the work force, cost of living, work ethic, utilities, crime rate, and ease of transportation.

To meet the increasing market demand, the decision was made last year to expand our Roanoke facility, doubling our production capacity. Although we considered several locations, the decision to build adjacent to our current facility was based largely on the positive outlook for the Roanoke valley, and the strong ties to our community.

This expansion project gave us the opportunity to extend our competitive edge in the market, and reinvest in Botetourt County.
